Baltimore's Great Fire

- 1904 -

BUILDING that the world at large does not realize that the Baltimore fire of February 7 and 8, 1904, was in many respects the greatest in the world's history, and after looking over the numerous books and pamphlets of illustrations, and in many instances inaccurate descriptions that have been published, we decided to publish "Gloominger's" Views of Baltimore's Great Fire, taken during and immediately after the fire, showing the ruins as they have not been shown in any other publication, and cannot be, as many of the walls were torn down a few hours after our pictures were taken. We will give but a brief review of the cause, loss, etc. and let our pictures tell the story.

History records the fact that nearly all the large cities of the world have had their great fires. Dating back to the burning of Rome, A. D. 64, when five-sixths of the city was destroyed, in 1080, London, again in 1212, London, and in 1666, London, when 100,000 were burned over, loss $5,750,000, in 1704, London, in 1812, Moscow, burned, loss $15,000,000, in 1842, Hamburg, loss $5,000,000, in 1891, London, loss $10,000,000, in 1871, Paris, Communis cottages, loss $100,000,000, in 1882, London, December 8-10, loss $5,000,000, in 1900, Ottawa, Hal., Canada, 403 buildings destroyed, loss $12,000,000.

Baltimore, our beautiful Monumental City has also had what would seem more than her share of large fires in the past, dating back to December 4th, 1796, when a fire broke out on a light street, opposite what is now known as the Court House, where the armchairs Hotel stood at the last fire were burned, in 1835, large fire on Calvert street, same year, riots and fire, growing out of the failure of the bank of Maryland, broke out in different parts of the city, 1838 was known as the "Reign of Terror," when many prominent buildings were burned, including the Court House, at that time, and 17 of the most buildings in the country, in 1842, explosion of gas in the Market, forty to fifty persons killed, in 1843, St. Paul, 17,000 of the city, 10,000 and San Francisco, loss $1,000,000, same year, large fire on Baltimore street, loss $200,000, 1857, April 14, number of persons killed, loss $1,000,000, Lombard burned and 14 persons killed, 1858, Humber and Lombard streets, 1860, McChillans street, assistant engineer killed, 1860, 100 men killed, 1873, Clay street fire, see descriptions of that fire in two of books, in 1876 several large fires, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1881, bruary 8th, 3 P. M., when Chief Engineer, Geo. W. Horton, declared it under control. There were 68 fire companies in service at the fire; 28 of Baltimore and 40 from other places, representing 13 cities and towns, including Baltimore, 3 States, nearly by towns and cities, Roland Park, Relay, Annapolis and Sparrows Point, Md., Washington, D. C., New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., York, Pa., Harrisburg, Pa., Chester, Pa., Altoona, Pa.; 1000 enrolled officers and members of the companies and 200 unattached volunteers were on duty. There were 91,350 feet of hose used and 31,550 feet were destroyed. One first-class engine and one truck of Baltimore department destroyed. While many of the firemen suffered greatly with sore eyes, due to the intense heat, but few were injured and none killed. Engine-man Mark Kelly, of engine No. 16, New York, died February 25th of pneumonia, caused by his heroic work during the fire. (The citizens of Baltimore presented his widow with a purse of several thousand dollars.)

It is impossible, for want of space, to tell of the many heroic deeds performed and the great service rendered by both the firemen and citizens; there is, however, one incident that we feel should be named whenever the opportunity is offered—that of Chief Judge Henry D. Harlan, of the Supreme Bench, who, with his coat off, worked all Sunday night to save our new and beautiful $2,000,000 marble Court House, with its valuable records. He was assisted by Supt. of Public Buildings, Miller and Assistant Supt. Leonard and members of the Bar and officials of the Courts. Chief Horton received several severe electric shocks from live wires on the first day of the fire, after which District Chief August Emerich took charge as acting chief and did efficient service.

The fire burned over an area of about 150 acres, covered by 70 to 80 city blocks, of 2,500 buildings occupied by about 5,000 firms, throwing out of employment about 50,000 persons, some of them only temporarily, but many had to seek employment at less remunerative salaries, the total loss estimated $125,000,000, insurance estimated $75,000,000. Every daily newspaper (except one), nearly all weekly and monthly publications, all type foundries, all electrotypes and photo-engravers, eighty job printing establishments, all wholesale paper and card dealers (except one), many bookbinders and paper rulers, ten or twelve national banks (including some of the largest), several large savings banks, six or seven of the large trust companies' buildings, nearly all bankers and stock brokers, including stock exchange building, all large office buildings (except two), B. & O. R. R. Co.'s general office building, ticket office, steamship offices, W. U. Telegraph main office, C. & P. Telephone exchange and general offices, Adams and U. S. Express offices, United Railway and Electric Light and Power Co.'s general offices and Pratt street power house (in part), ten well equipped hotels, including the Carrollton, large number of small ones, nearly all the principal restaurants and quick lunch rooms, all life, fire and marine insurance companies, buildings and agencies with one or two exceptions; nearly all wholesale dry goods, dry goods commission, notion, millinery, boot and shoe, rubber, drug, paint, oil, hardware, cloth, book and stationery, toy, house furnishing, leather, stoves, seed, iron, candy factories, baking powder factories, machinist supplies, scales, ship chandlers, whiskey, tea, coffee, tobacco, cigars, harness, umbrella factories, flour (one large flour mill), grocers, foreign fruits, fish, oyster, general commission merchants, grain commission merchants, including their building chamber of commerce, many clothing, shirt and neckwear manufacturers, merchants and manufacturers' association, tin can factories, canning factories and millions of cans of canned goods, box factories, grain and feed stores, cord wood, kindling wood mills, many produce dealers, nearly all manufacturers of silver ware, all wholesale jewelers, all the principal retail jewelers, all the large retail clothing stores (except one), nearly all men's shoe stores, gents' furnishing goods, hats, tailors, two of the largest retail drug stores, retail cigar stores, two of the largest retail furniture and carpet stores, publishing houses, piano and organ manufacturers and dealers, all business colleges, all typewriting machine agencies, several sewing machine agencies, music stores, opticians, three-fifths of the lawyers, real estate dealers, hundreds of saloons, merchants' club building on German street; in fact we question if any department of manufacturing or wholesale or retail business carried on in the city escaped, thus making it the greatest fire in the world's history. Supposed cause of fire, lighted cigar, cigarette or match blown through broken "dead eye" in vault under sidewalk. The insurance companies (with the exception of a few of the local ones, who went into receivers' hands) are paying the losses in full as fast as adjustments are made.

The building on the corner of Baltimore and Sharp streets was on the spot where the Old Hall stood that the Continental Congress met in when it fled from Philadelphia in 1779.

The Church of the Messiah (the only church burned) was one of the historical ecclesiastical buildings in Baltimore. It was built in 1818 and was formerly Christ Church until that congregation built its present church at the corner of Chase and St. Paul streets.

Our photographs were taken by Wm. J. Groeninger, whose reputation for out-door photography is known as being "always the best." The half tones were made by one of the best photo-engravers in the country, and the printing done by a firm that has a national reputation for this class of work; the paper the very best, making a book that you will always be pleased with yourself and send to your friends or customers, knowing that it is the best. THOMAS' FACTORY WHERE FIRE STARTED.

RUINS LOOKING NORTHEAST FROM FIRST ENGLISH LUTHERAN CHURCH, LEXINGTON ST., ETC.

The Clay street fire, of which we show six illustrations, believed to be the only ones in existence, took place July 25, 1873, and was the most destructive one Baltimore ever had until the one of February 7th and 8th, 1904. It started in a box of shavings in the factory of Joseph Thomas & Sons, Park avenue and Clay street. The fire burned from 10.15 A. M. to 4 P. M. During that time four blocks were consumed, and the official report of Fire Inspector Holloway stated that the losses included two churches, three two-story-and-attic brick houses, sixty-four three-story brick houses, eighteen four-story brick houses, one two-story frame house, one three-story frame house and one one-story brick house. The loss was estimated at $750,000, of which one-third was covered by insurance. The property burned covered nearly the entire area between Saratoga and Lexington streets, from Liberty street east on a line midway between Park avenue and Howard street on the west. Two engines were sent over from Washington, making the run from that city to Baltimore in thirty-nine minutes. Sparks ignited buildings several blocks distant. Excitement was intense. There were numerous accidents, one girl died from fright and many persons were arrested for stealing property that had been taken from the burning buildings.
